GUILTY LOVE PUNISHED BY RIFLE BALLS.

STORY OF AN OLD LOUISIANA TRAGEDY.

The Murdered Man's Dog Came Into Court and Accused the Murderer by Growls—Romance of the Land of Evangeline.

THE ACADIAN VILlage of St. Martin's ville, on the plas-turoque River Teeche, the home of Evangeline, has a criminal as well as a romantic history.
There was organized the first vigilance committee in the history of Louisiana. There was a bit of bloodshed blended with this tragedy. After the Quilico Shone (Calcasieu) Indians, assisted by the French and Acadian settlers, had exterminated the Atakapas Indians in a pitched battle at Indian Bend, a few miles above historic St. Martin'sville, there suddenly appeared a mixed tribe of Indians called by them Red Bones. The word Atak-apas signifies "man eaters," and when any of the settlers were slain a cannibal feast followed. So the good Indians joined in their extermination.
But whence came these large, powerful Indians, whose bones were red like the man of the forest, yet they were partly of Acadian parentage? They came up the Teeche in their bark canoes, and built their wigwags at Indian Bend—upon the mounds of the Atakapas. They had no distinctive tribe nor name, and the Acadians called them Red Bones. This strange tribe assumed the occupation of basket making, which had been pursued by the massacred Atakapas. For a long time they enjoyed the monopoly of this trade with the settlers of what is now known as the Atakapas country, which comprises five parishes in south-western Louisiana. The Acadians, descended of the French immigrants, or settlers, from Nova Scotia, had a large settlement on the River Teeche, now known as St. Martin'sville. The colony docked a number of "sloops," and French from the "lower coast," the Mississippi, and a few Americans who had left their country for a season. This mixed population of the Poste du Atakapas exchanged a mean article of whiskey and some trinkets to the Red Bones for baskets and wigwags, which they transported to New Orleans in bateaux, together with hides, meat and game, which was abundant in that wild section. These flat-bottomed, square-bottomed boats were propelled by two men and were heavily laden, especially on the return trip. A fleet of twenty or more would start from the Poste du Atakapas, and come down to the Crescent city, "lying up" at night, when there would be dancing, drinking, gambling, and of course, fighting. The Red Bones accompanied these voyages and the two villages became very neighborly through this commerce. After selling their hides, meat, tobacco and baskets at the city, there were lively times at this frontier post for a few days, or as long as the whiskey lasted.
Indian Bend was deserted, and braves, squaws and panegones came down the Poste to assist in the festivities.
To one of these "rouls," many years ago, according to freestone tradition, Cata-on-on came with his wife, Mermen-tau. The reception consisted of pony races, foot racing, Indian baseball, dancing and fighting, the taffia (whisky) being the most popular element. The Red Bones' villagers had brought down their remaining basket work, blankets, ponies and skins to wager on their favorite sports. The evening was a dance at the log cabin of Alceon soon overtook the guilty fugitives, when a running fight of horseback followed. Finally they rode side by side and their knives were used. While Cata-on-on was aiming a blow at Bievenue, the red bones with their arms and Bievenue stabbed him to the heart.

They hastily buried the body of Cata-on-on in a ravine by the roadside, covering the grave with leaves and brush. Bievenue then returned to the Poste de Atakapas, leading the pony he had brought for the "Pure Face," while she took her murdered husband's ponies back to their home.
Cata-on-on's faithful dog had followed him on this midnight ride to vengeance and death, and also followed back to the village his mistress, who had assisted in the murder. The dog accounted for absence of Cata-on-on naturally created inquiries among the Red Bones villagers. The "Pure Face," after giving forth a wailing cry, declared that one of her former lovers, Trieche, an Acadian, might be the cause of his disappearance. It was learned however, that Trieche had been killed because of his wailing attention. This was shown to be not probable, and she then made a general charge, alleging murder for the purpose of robbery. The two villages were thoroughly aroused, and the people united in search for the body and discovery of the murderer, for that was generally believed. About a week after the murder a party of Acadians rode by the spot, and one of them saw Cata-on-on's faithful dog digging the ravine, making inquisitous. The party halted, looked in-quisitively at each other, and, without a word being spoken, they rode to where the dog was. He expressed his fondness for the men in such a way, by moaning, looking wistfully at them and then scratching the dirt, that they dismounted and began to search at the spot designated by the dog. They removed the brush, leaves and driftwood, and in the ravine they found the body of the murdered Cata-on-on.

After the burial of the body an investigation began. Court was convened at Indian Bend, and he was called, sent out deputies to bring in any man they might suspect. Among those who acted as special constables was Bievenue, the murderer. Unusual in such cases, he was very active, and his zeal was enough to excite suspicion from a more piqued victim.
The murdered Indian's faithful dog, the discoverer of his master's body, was an interested spectator in court. Every time the murderer entered the room with a suspect the dog growled at him, but did not growl at any one else. Finally a brother of the murdered Indian, who had been silently and stolidly observing the proceedings, gave a significant nod, pointing to the dog and the murderer.
His face brightened as he saw the dog continue to growl at the man as an enemy. All eyes were turned toward the dog, and the Indian pointed toward him, glaring with vengeance. Then the finding of the corpse through the moaning of the dog flashed upon the mind of the court, and some of the Indians became visibly agitated, and the justice ordered his arrest on suspicion. He was placed in jail, a log hut which is entered at the top, the prisoner being let down by means of a ladder, after which the ladder is drawn up, and the hole in the roof is closed and a weight placed over it.

Pure face was next arrested and committed to jail. She made a full confession, adding that she aided through fear, but gave no reason for her flight. A mass meeting of the inhabitants of the two villages was held and some of the Indians insisted upon the murderer being given to them for punishment, as one of their number had been killed.
Their mode of punishment was by taking the culprit beyond the limits of the village and beating him to death with clubs. The Acadians held that this mode was too "uncivilized" and preferred the mode of execution by tak-
village and beating him to death with clubs. The justice and his officers were unable to protect the prisoners and the "committee," consisting of about two hundred Acadians, arrived in the village square next morning at daylight.

A committee was appointed to draft resolutions giving the reasons for the committee's action, and another committee was appointed to bring the prisoner from jail and the woman from the cabin where she was held.
The murderer was not given a cup of black coffee, tied hands and feet and made to kneel at the base of a large live oak tree in the center of the public square. Then black handkerchiefs were placed over their faces. At this point the man confessed, confirming the woman's story.

Six men with loaded guns, three Acadians and three Red Bones Indians, stood ten feet in front of the kneeling murderers and when Rouge-Meo dropped his handkerchief there was a report as of one gun. The bullets

A SOLDIER OF FRANCE.

How They Were Made at the Military School at St. Cyr.

In "A Boy of the First Empire," Elbridge S. Poylles' story of Napoleon in St. Nicholas, is told how the youthful hero was made into "a soldier of France."

So it was soon over, for all the world like some wonderful fairy tale, and Philip Desnoettes, son of the emigre, brought back to the washerwomen's market place of the emperor, turned his back upon the narrow and dirty street he had once called his home, and riding away from the past, was entered as a pupil in the military school of St. Cyr.

From the day when, as a new boy, he was introduced into the new school of St. Cyr, and was gradually transformed from an uncouth street-boy to a little machine, to the day when, four years later, he left it for other scenes, Philip Desnoettes' life was one of continuous training. He got up by the drum, he ate his meals by the drum, he went to bed by the drum. He learned to drill, to ride, and to build fortifications; he received instruction in languages, literature, history and mathematics; he toughened with fatigue, developed by austere discipline, lived by rule, played pranks and took his punishment as he did his medicine—without grumbling, growl, strengthened in mind and body, learned to be a French schoolboy, a French soldier, a French gentleman.

Then came 1810. Great things had been happening while Philip was schoolboy at St. Cyr. The map of Europe had been changed again and again, and Napoleon was the mag-nifier. There had been "times" and rumors of war; there had been mighty marches, bloody battles and terrible triumphs; and with march and battle and triumph the future of Napoleon, emperor of the French, had grown to mighty proportions. In 1810 France and Napoleon were the greatest names in all the world. And Philip had met Corporal Peyrolles.

Peyrolles, the wooden-legged, had left his good leg of flesh on the bloody field of Austerlitz, and, as a soldier of the emperor, had been made one of the first sergeants in St. Cyr school.

To Peyrolles the emperor was not a man, he was "the emperor," and the Peyrolles worshipped him even as did the Romans of old worship their highest and bravest—something more than mortal. And yet the boys at St. Cyr declared that but for Peyrolles the emperor would never have been; for it was Peyrolles' delight to recount for the boys at St. Cyr how "if and the emperor" conquered the world.

But it was largely by Peyrolles' friendly promptings, plus the instruction of the St. Cyr school, that Philip became proficient in drill and ambitious of glory. And when, over before the allotted term of training, the summons came to "the emperor," Philip wrote upon the emperor, the boy felt that both fame and glory lay well within his grasp.

But Peyrolles said: "See what it is to have Corporal Peyrolles for your friend, cadet. Do you think it is because your sharp ears served the emperor, when you were but a boy of the street, that he now calls you to his side, even before your military schooling is done?
Not so. It is because of me. It is because Peyrolles has had you in his hand.
The emperor has heard of it. He bids you come to him that you may show others in his service what it is to be loved in arms by the man who helped the emperor to win the day at Aro-lis and Lodi, at Castiglione and the Pyramids, at Marengo and Uten and Amsterdam. Long live the emperor, and long live Peyrolles, his right hand! Do not disgrace my teaching. You are but an infant yet, cadet. But so were we all once, and even a child can be taught to listen, you cadet. Rush not rashly into danger, but, once in, do not back out.
Strike not until you can strike swift and sure. Obey, and you shall be loved; seek glory, and glory shall seek you. Be a soldier of France, and France shall be proud of her brave, and shall say to the world: 'Behold, this cadet was a pupil of Peyrolles of St. Cyr, grenadier and helper of the emperor!'"

A Feminine Invention Miss Elvira Bailey of New York is an inventor. It is said she has made a placket fastener that really fastens, rain boots that are light enough to carry in the pocket, and a shoe button that stays on the shoe. Now, if Miss Bailey will kindly invent a pocket that can be found her sex will owe her a debt of gratitude which may take substantial form.

STRUCK THE WRONG CROWD.

A Fakers' Appetite Encouraged by Trained by Hungry Strikers.

The dapper little man in the check coat with the curly hair and a large yellow valise, saw a good-sized crowd on the street corner and immediately diverted his course to it. He didn't take time to stop to find out what was the reason of the crowd's gathering, but began business at once.
The thick case was given a dexterous twist that developed it into a tripod, and the large yellow valise was placed on top of it.

"Gentlemen," began the dapper man. The crowd concentrated its collective eyes on him. "I have here," continued the orator, with the easy confidence of a man whose life has been passed in public speaking, "I have here for sale at each a bottle of Old Mother Sohno's Homemade Root Bitters. These bitters, gentlemen, are warranted to cure any case of loss of appetite that ever existed. Ten drops taken as a dose before meal time will make the most dyspeptic man want porterhouse steaks, fried chicken, ice cream, a "whole half of a pig."

He said no more. The crowd of hungry strikers, who had been living for two weeks on half a meal every day, took to the bottle. They jammed his yellow valise, bottles and all, all down over his head and chased him up the street at wondrous speed.

FEWER HOT BOXES NOW.

Improvements Have About Done Away With the Lumber Annoyance.

Those who have traveled much by rail are more or less acquainted with the hot box, as it is commonly called, really means a hot journal bearing or both. It arises sometimes from the use of poor material in the bearing somewhat of an account of imperfect casting, and sometimes from too great weight upon the bearing, producing friction and heat.

There are now fewer hot boxes than formerly. Some of the heaviest trucks, thus distributing the weight of each end of the car upon six journal bearings instead of four, and reducing the danger of excessive friction. Better materials are used and the workmanship upon them is better, weights to be carried are calculated more nicely, and greater care is exercised in operation, so that the hot box is not what it once was. A man formerly familiar with railroads, who made not long ago a trip of 10,000 miles which included points as far apart as the City of Mexico, San Francisco and Chicago, said that he did not encounter a hot box until he was within twenty miles of New York on his return.

Peter the Great.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that an Englishman who was passing lately through a small village in Russia, saw a peasant's cottage to take for a cup of tea. Hanging on the wall, framed in a tea-table, the edges of which were turned over to form a hot box, was a portrait in oil of Peter the Great. Having bought it for half-a-crown, he showed it in St. Petersburg to the curators of the Hermitage gallery, who, after consulting their catalogues, identified it pretty surely with the picture at Versailles; but considered that if they were by the same hand, or copied one from the other, the picture at Versailles, and the original was this.
The portrait, if not the finest of any existing is inferior to none, and will probably be purchased eventually by the imperial family.

DEED OF WHITECAPS.

Shoot a Man Dead in the Presence of His Family.

Two masked men forced an entrance into the house of Thomas Edgington, at Springfield, Ky., between 12 and 1 o'clock the other morning, and in the presence of his wife and five children shot him dead. Edgington jumped out of bed when he discovered the men in the room, and was grabbed by one of them, while the other put a bullet in his brain. Edgington had been anonymously warned several times by whitecaps that he was to be killed.
He had refused to believe the warnings, and to give Edgington a severe thrashing, but, upon meeting with resistance, they killed him for fear of being recognized. There is no clew to the perpetrators of the deed. Officers are making every effort to apprehend the guilty parties.

Dolph will succeed himself as Senator from Oregon and Wolcott will probably be as fortunate in Colorado.

Delaware's new Republican governor can't read or write, but he expects to be able to make his mark all the same.

Texas' 300-pound Hogg is going to start a newspaper and sit down hard upon his enemies. Oh, Lard!—Louisville Times. Will he edit it with a Hogg pen?

Joe Bacon and Joe Fite, of Georgetown, will go to Williamsburg and take charge of the Herald. The last named gentleman will—judging by his name—look after the collections.

The Tennessee House has concurred in the senate resolution and the gubernatorial contest will not be settled until charges of fraud are investigated. Gov. Turney will hold over pending the investigation.

Col. R. W. Nelson, of Covington, is the latest candidate announced for Lieutenant Governor. C. M. D. Brown, of this city, and Senator R. T. Tyler, of Hickman, are the other announced candidates, with some talk of Oscar Turner, of Louisville.

The Sturgis Enterprise has been changed into the Sturgis Ledger and is now issued as a five-column quarto, all home print. The new proprietor, Headley C. R., is evidently a newspaper man who understands the business, and improvements are noticeable in every department of the paper.

A fire in Butte City, Montana, Tuesday night caused the explosion of large stores of powder, and the loss of life was frightful. Up to Wednesday at noon 40 dead bodies had already been recovered from the ruins, and many more are thought to have been consumed in the burning buildings. The property loss is enormous.

A writer in the Hopkinsville Kentuckian advocates in a well-written article the movement for the abolition of toll gates and for their purchase by the state. This subject is pushing itself to the front all over the State, and the sooner Daviess county realizes the great good to be derived from such a change, the better it will be for her and all her people.—Owensboro Messenger.

Tuesday's Courier-Journal eclipsed all records for big papers in Kentucky. It was six times the usual size, containing forty-eight pages and three hundred and eighty-four columns. It was devoted chiefly to write-ups of the breeding, tobacco and whisky interests of the State. There were many beautiful illustrations and numerous portraits of man and beast. One page of the paper was devoted to the reproduction of Congressman McCrory's latest speech.

Many United States senators have been nominated this week. In North Carolina the Republicans and Populists carried out their bargain and chose J. C. Pritchard, Rep., for the two-year term and Mark Butler, Pop., for the long term. Horace R. Chilton, Dem., in Texas; W. J. Sewell, Rep., in New Jersey and Win. Sewell, Rep., in Idaho, were other selections. In Delaware, Higgins, Rep., was nominated by one vote, the Addicks men bolting the caucus. The split in the Republican ranks may cause the defeat of Higgins in the election yet to be held.

France is in the midst of a crisis that threatens the life of the Republic form of government. The cabinet was overthrown on Monday and this was followed by the resignation of President Casimir-Perier. The whole country is thrown into tumult and excitement, and to add to the complications the Duke of Orleans, the pretender to the throne of France, has started from London for Belgium to be near at hand in case there is a revolution. France has reached the most critical period of its history since the overthrow of the empire.

Miss Hannah Green, of Vincennes, Ind., was struck speechless while dancing at a ball. She is otherwise as well as usual.

The appointment of Hon. L. C. Linn, of Murray, as Judge Grace's successor, is mentioned in our news columns. Mr. Linn is a native of Calloway county, and is a son of the late Reuben Linn, who moved to that county from Trigg in 1823. He is 45 years of age and a lawyer of fine attainments, and his friends say will be a credit to the bench of the State. He was born in humble circumstances but by close application and great energy has made himself worthy of the appointment just given him to this most honorable position. He was a confederate soldier in Holt's company, and received wounds at the battle of Shiloh that made him a cripple for life.

AND HE DIED.

The Old Man Met His Fate in That Small Cell.

She was a typewriter. Of course she isn't pretty as far as a hen that isn't a chicken or a circle that isn't round. Nobody ever saw one—at least, who lived to write about it.

He was the senior member of the firm, but susceptible, for all that. He was written. He wanted to ask her a few tendentious questions. He dared not commit them to paper, oh no! He dared not speak aloud for fear some of the weak-headed clerks or junior partners would catch on and squeal.

For three days he thought, then hit upon a plan. He would inveigle her into the sanctum of his telephone closet.

He did so. "Little dear," he pleaded there, "will you go to the opera to-night with me and for a little supper afterwards? Don't refuse me, I will promise you a glorious time."

The sweet girl blushed. Oh, it was indeed a temptation. She tried to speak. What her answer was no one shall ever know for just at that instant there was a buzz at the telephone. With pallid faces and trembling hands the senior drew the phone from afar. "Yes, dear, thank you. Come home early. I will be ready on time."

The doctors called it heart failure. But the wife and the little blond typewriter knew more than these wise men.

Edwin and Edwin.

Constancy and devotion were in the blood of Edwin Booth, as his published letters, edited by his daughter, abundantly show. I recalled, as I glanced over the other day, the touching love story of his daughter Edwin.

The man to whom she was engaged to be married became demoralized through his accidental inhalation of illuminating gas, and for years father and daughter were bound in the peculiar helplessness of any other tie to bind them more closely together. Both sent him abroad and gave him the best of medical advice, while his daughter nursed him with an unselfish fealty, which lasted until his untimely death. Booth ardently longed for a son, and tried to alleviate his disappointment over the birth of a girl by baptizing her Edwin. The child grew to be the man's other self, however, and the time came when the father would not have exchanged Edwin for a dozen Edwin's. The domestic history of the two is one of the sweetest and rarest stories of the age.

Meals for Young Children.

One of the most interesting applications of kindergarten methods has been made in the teaching of music to young children. The instruction is begun at a very early age. Tiny children are taught to sound a given note after it has been struck on the piano, and to do many things that at first seem impossible to the very little ones. The method is so simple and usually imparted in later years, with much labor to both teacher and pupil, is thus acquired with comparative ease.

Quick Inventor Making.

A German inventor has turned out a machine for the making of butter in small quantities. A receptacle containing the cream is attached to a bar which has a reciprocating motion imparted to it by means of a revolving crank and connecting rod. A wheel is turned by hand and the connecting rod is moved backward and forward, thus making the cream into butter. The receptacle, the contents of which are speedily converted into butter.

Interupted Trial of the Ericsson.

The torpedo boat Ericsson was recently taken to Stratford, Conn., for a preliminary speed trial on the Long Island course. All went well with the boat until, when nearing the finish the piston rod belonging to the low pressure engine broke, and this mishap was followed by the breaking of the flanges. The starboard engine was completely crippled and the Ericsson was brought to New London by the port engine. Just previous to the accident, her propellers had been running at 420 revolutions per minute, which is equivalent to 24 knots per hour. At the moment the rod gave way it was making 410 turns per minute. The accident will delay the final trial considerably, since the broken parts must be made in Dubuque, where the Ericsson was built.

JOHN BOYD THACHER A WITNESS.

He Fully Verifies a Disputed World's Fair Award.

John Boyd Thacher is laconic and decisive in his statements. During the lively campaign just closed in New York, this marked him especially as chairman of the Democratic State Committee. It was equally true of him as chairman of the Executive committee on Awards at the World's Fair. This is the positive and sententious way in which he verifies in an official letter, the honors won by Dr. Price's Baking Powder: "I herewith enclose you an official copy of your award, which in due time will be inscribed in the diploma and forwarded." Thus the question respecting the award, raised by an envious New York rival, is settled beyond cavil. This same rival by the way is widely advertising an award for itself. The official records prove this claim wholly false as they show the New York pretender was not so much an exhibitor at the World's Fair.

Is Life a Ladder?
[To R. H. Free.]

Is our life a ladder, Upon which we climb round by round?
Then, let us step up higher, Every day above the ground.
Each noble deed we perform, Each kind word we say Will dissipate the fearful storm, And help to make calm the way.

Let our ambition be ascend, Alas! to the barriers that annoy, Each good deed will depend Upon the motive we employ.
Onward and upward we climb, Grand and nobler each year, Admirers at our shrine, Seeing, will take heart and persevere.

Many sad things we meet,
That endeavor our course to turn,
To lead astray our weary feet—
All of them we must outrun.
Temptations, annoyances and strong,
Will confront us in the face,
To yield would be very wrong Our footsteps we must not retract.

The many wrongs we will detest And strive for what is right, Wickedness, we will disown And conquer in the fight.
The many, many acts we do,
Which are kindness or love, Will enable us a better course to pursue And lift us many rounds above.

Then will a kind friend Anxious to secure rise
To us a helping hand lend,
And give kind good advice.
We climb up the highest When we love and think the most,
We do not fret and envy When we turn our heads to boast.

Willingly then we will ascend, With untiring persistent pace; Climbing patiently to the end,
The goal we will embrace.
Yes, courage we have still,
Happily smile on our fate And trust our ascent till We have passed beyond Heaven's gate.

Cold Wave.
[Contributed.]
The cold wave Saturday night, Told you, my friends, I saw a great sight, A man of Church Hill, six feet and laid, He shivered and shook and said to all,
I'm going to bed before the great squall,
And in he rolled breeches and all.

He got next to the blanket and said to his wife, I can't get warm to save my life, She brought in more covers and wrapped him up tight,
For the felt quilt that it was a cold night,
And now for the blanket and every wife, Have plenty of cover for the sake of your life;
For those breeches were looked at with perfect delight.

They saved a man's life in the wave Saturday night.
Prof. Jno. B. DeMotte needs no words of introduction to those who have heard him. His lecture is brave, instructive and eloquently rendered. At the tabernacle 24th inst.—Cleveland Leader.

Crocodile Tears.
The expression used in the headline has long been in general use to describe hypocritical sorrow, or pretense of sorrow where no grief is felt. Its origin has been referred to several sources one, believed by the old naturalists, was that crocodiles wept great agony until a symptom of death, and another source, and was accounted for his trouble. Manderville says: "In a certain country long serpents called crocodiles slay men and eat them up." The "cruel crafty crocodile, which in false grief hating his harmful guile, doth weep full sore and sheddeth tender tears."

One Woman's Sheddeth.
A woman cured her husband of staying out late at night by going to the door when he came home and saying, "Will you please go to bed?"

equal amount being arrived between the other three colleges. The receipts from other games make the year's profits reach nearly $30,000. The athletic association of the university is now for the first time in its history free from all indebtedness and has in its treasury nearly $9,000. On Oct. 1, 1893, the deficit amounted to $4,553.97, in addition to an indebtedness to the board of directors, individually, of some $1,500, making a total of about $10,000. The membership of the athletic association is now $50, of which 315 are graduates, 492 undergraduates, and 52 life members.—New York Clipper.

THE RING.

The death in London, England, of George Smith, the pugilist, from injuries received in his contest with "Dummy" Winters, Dec. 7, has resulted in the arrest of three sporting newspaper reporters, together with the timekeeper and the promoter of the fight. They will be charged with being accessories to the crime of manslaughter.

Jack Edwards and Mike Conway, respectively of Brooklyn and Jersey City, met near Newton, L. I., on the morning of Dec. 11, and fought with skin tight gloves for a purse, which Edwards won by knocking his adversary out in the ninth Queensberry round.

Charley Wood and Jim Judge were opponents in a prize fight that took place at Haddonville, N. J., on Dec. 11, the latter winning. It is reported that the Camden county grand jury will make the affair a subject for investigation.

"Kid" Hogan and "Bad" Lolly engaged in a glove contest at Cincinnati, Ohio, recently, but the police stopped it at midnight, when the ladies were in the ninth round of a capital bout, of which Hogan had the best at the time.

Beyond Comparison.

Are the good qualities possessed by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Above all it purifies the blood, thus strengthening the system, it regulates the digestive organs, invigorates the kidneys and liver, tones and builds up the entire system, cures Scrofula, Dyspepsia, Catarrh and Rheumatism. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

Hood's PILLS cure all liver ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache, &c.

Quicker Timekeepers.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employ a gourd upon which the stars of the heavens are marked. As the constellations rise in the sky, the Indian refers to his gourd and finds out the hour. By turning the gourd around he can tell the order in which the constellations may be expected to appear. The hill people of Assam reckon time and distance by the number of quids of betelnuts chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, Governor Wouter Van Twiller dismissed the Dutch colonial assembly invariably at the last puff of his third pipe of tobacco. A Montagnais Indian of Canada will set up a long stick in the snow, when traveling ahead of friends who are to follow. He marks with his foot the line of shadow cast, and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell on arriving at the spot how far ahead the leader is.

Carmot's Successor.

M. Casimir Perier, president of the French republic, during his recent tour in the provinces, drove about in an especially constructed carriage, the seat of which was so high that an ordinary person could scarcely reach it from the street. Any reputation of the Caserio incident would have been impossible. The president was always accompanied in his drives by a large force ofgendarmes, and at the various railroad stations the public was carefully excluded from the platform.

GOITRE IN THE NECK

The Electropoise has cured what was supposed to be goitre on the neck of Mrs. Low Thompson of Montgomery, Ky. The enlargement began to diminish soon after treatment of the Electropoise was applied; at this time it does not show at all. Large quantities of mucus was thrown off, and sometimes corruption an inch long and as large as my little finger. Others of my friends have the Electropoise and the one in my family has proved its curative powers on more than one occasion.

W. H. RECTOR,

Cadiz, Ky., Nov. 1, 1894.
Dear Sirs:—I write to inform you that I am more than satisfied with the investment I made with the Electropoise. I am now a well woman where I was a perfect wreck from the effects of asthma. I commenced treatment last July.

Mrs. W. H. RECTOR,

Cadiz, Ky., May 14, 1894.
Mrs. Rector, under date of August 3d, says: "My health continues good; I have no return of asthma and am in better health than I have ever been in my life; have gained in weight over 15 pounds. A neighbor of mine is using it for goitre, and it has very much reduced the largest of her neck; think she will be entirely cured."

Probability That There Will Be No

More Glove Fights.

All of the time worn arguments in favor of boxing as a sport will hardly have to save the game from a trace like state now that a second fatality has occurred in the ring within a month. The death of Con. Elsdon in Syracuse recently brought a storm of denunciation upon the heads of the knuckle knights, but that, seemingly, was argued away when it was shown that the big California heavy-weight was in no condition physically to set, even in the lightest kind of a set-to. But what can be said in extenuation of the death of poor little Andy Bowen? He was trained to the hour seemingly, and was in rare good condition. Still he did not live much longer than Elsdon after getting the final blow. Those who know the methods of the ring will realize at once that the officials of the Auditorium club were criminally negligent in failing to have the floor of the ring padded sufficiently to prevent such an accident, but those in a position to argue the point will be drowned to complete silence by the hue and cry which will now be raised. The New Orleans fatality means that boxing will be dead in this country for some months to come—probably. But as the ring has lived down several similar accidents, it is reasonable to expect that it will do so again. It is better prepared in every way to do it. Boxing as conducted within the last five years was never on a higher level, or more devoid of all semblance to that brutality which distinguished knuckle fights on the turf under London prize ring rules. The size of the gloves to begin with, precludes the possibility of direct injury being inflicted by a blow, no matter how powerful, provided the recipient be capable, in a physical sense, of receiving such a blow from a jarring punch. Club contests, conducted under careful auspices, have always been popular. That does not mean that the rougher element of a community is in attendance, for exactly the reverse is true. Men of standing in the business and professional world are among those who have patronized bouts between boxers of the higher rank and the riff-raff is kept on the outside by a scale of prices much beyond their reach. It is certain, too, that no other sport in the calendar is capable of creating such profound interest as a boxing match between two men of national or international reputation. Take, for instance, the contest between Champion Corbett and Charley Mitchell, Fla. last winter. Hundreds went from different northern cities to see the battle decided, although each and every one knew that it could not last more than half an hour at the longest. To enjoy that brief space men spent hundreds of dollars in traveling and living expenses and paid from $30 to $50 admission to the arena and then witnessed less than five minutes of actual work by the contestants. At the very start and up to the last moment it was not certain that the contest would be held. That was the chance the tourists took, but they took it gladly and only a few complaints were made because of the brief duration of the struggle. The greatest horse race of the century would not have attracted one third the interest,

WILLIAM DELANEY.

nor would even an international yacht race or any other contest in the sporting line. On that line of reasoning it is safe to assume that boxing has received a terrible, but possibly only a temporary setback by the unfortunate ending of the New Orleans carnival.

An Ember Vision.

As I sat and watched the fire, burning softly In the grate,
Many loved and dear old faces in my memory There were,
Till the embers, slow consuming, burned in Some fantastic shape,
And I saw my mem'ry pictures vanish up The blue smoke.
Yet among those ember faces—faces flitting Like a fast—
One there lingered, soft and loving, sweeter, Dearest than them all,
Twas my mother's kind old visage, as I knew It in the past,
When I loved her not comparing, since She's gone beyond recall.
Every whisper of hair and wrinkle in the Embers seemed portrayed;
When the lips apart and smiling, and the eyes Their loving luster Slowly rose and fell her bosom, where so oft My head had strayed, Thall's sleep—'Was olden wishes where my Mother's picture grew—

The change to cold, following this period, will be very sudden, and an intensely frigid wave is down on the books, and preparations had better be made for it. The firm of Thompson & Meador, one of the most solid and reliable firms in the city, wish to call the attention of the people of Hopkinsville and surrounding country to the fact that they are now prepared to furnish the trade with lower prices on all goods in their several lines than ever before in the history of their business career. They do not claim to have the cheapest goods in the market, but the best goods at the lowest prices. Their plan is to buy only the best goods and sell nothing that they can not conscientiously recommend to their best friends. Honesty and fair dealing is the foundation stone on which they have erected their already successful and growing business. You will please notice they have a small space in the local columns on this page, which space they propose to devote almost exclusively to special sales, and the reader of the KENTUCKIAN will be given some splendid bargains during the year 1895, if they will only watch this space and take advantage of the opportunities offered them. Their first special sale will begin Monday, Jan. 21st. See advertisement.

ABOUT THE WEED.

Our market is steadily improving and sales as well as prices this week were better than those of last week. The extra offered Wednesday were mostly old lugs, and considering the quality, commanded good round figures. Very little of the crop was offered. Receipts are slowly improving, but are still very light. The loose market has fairly opened up, as yet, passed out of the hands of the producer. A few hds. of the '94 crop were among the offerings of the week and one of this character brought $7. It was leaf and was sold by Gaither & West.

HOPKINSVILLE MARKET.

Ragsdale, Cooper & Co. sold 70 hds. as follows: 35 hds. med. to good leaf, $3.20, 750, 720, 710, 700, 700, $90, 650, 600, 580, $90, 4 at 80 each, 710, 590, 580, 550, 560, 575, 570, 580, 590, 520, 575, 550, 560, 570, 575, 4 at 60 each, 550, 550.

LOUISVILLE TOBACCO MARKET.

Marked by Glover & Barnum—Louisville Tobacco Warehouse.
Sales on our market for the week just closed amount to 4249 hds., with receipts for the same period 2518 hds. Sales on our market since January 1st, amount to 6958 hds. Sales of the crop of 1894 on our market to this date amount to 16,161 hds.
The market for new dark tobacco, except for leaf of extra length, must be described as sluggish and low and very discouraging to sellers. Prices current here certainly offer no inducement to country dealers in the dark production sections.
The following quotations fairly represent our market for dark tobacco 1895 crop.

How A Great Story was Written.

The history of any great and successful undertaking is always interesting; therefore at the risk of being accused of violating personal confidence, we tell our readers of the origin of a famous story of the late war. The publishers of the Chicago Ledger wanted a story which, besides being a love story of great merit should vividly describe the thrilling events of the battle of Gettysburg and the siege of Richmond. One author after another failed in the work, and at last the famous St. George Rathbun was approached on the subject. He demanded a fabulous price for the work, but it was paid, and the story was actually written to order. It is, however, printed under the pen name of "Hugh Allen." It is declared by critics, who have been shown the advance sheets, to be the best story of the war ever written. The first installment of it appeared in No. 3 Vol. xxi of the Ledger, and at once attracted the greatest attention. A private letter from the editor informs us that in order to reach all classes of people, the publishers of the Ledger will not only open up chapters of the story free of charge to all who send in their names at once. The Ledger is a great paper, and each week gives story matter enough to make a dollar book. Address, The Chicago Ledger, Chicago, Ill. It.

The Smith Sisters.

The young ladies of the Methodist Church have arranged for a concert next Saturday night by the famous Ariel Sextette, or six Smith sisters. The Carthage, Mo., Democrat said of them: "The largest audience of the season greeted the Ariel Sextette at our Grand last night. To say that the audience was greatly pleased only mildly expresses it, for every number on the program met with hearty applause and many were heard to exclaim, 'This is the best I have ever heard of.' Opera House, Jan. 19."

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxative, which set for a time, but finally injure the system.
